Pseudo-Epiphanius, The Light of the Cross.

Listen now to the deeper meaning of Christ's suffering; listen and sing your hymn of praise; listen and extol the wonderful works of God. See how Law gives way, and Grace begins to flower; See how the ancient Types recede, how the shadows scatter, and our Sun now fills the whole world; see how the Old Law passes, and the New is ratified, how the past fades before the bright coming of the present.

At the house of Christ's Passion, there were two peoples met together in Sion, the Jews and the Gentiles; there were two kings, Pilate and Herod; there were two chief priests, Annas and Caiphas, so that the two Paschs might be kept together, the one on the point of ceasing, the other – the Pasch of Christ – to be celebrated for the first time. Two sacrifices were offered; so there was wrought a double salvation, salvation of the living and of the dead. The Jews were binding a lamb for sacrifice and slaughter; the Gentiles were binding God made Man. ...He, recognised as God, as he hung between the two thieves – he, this day, in the midst of the living and the dead, to both alike has brought life and salvation.

Homily II for Holy Saturday (P.G. xlili, 440-1, 468-9)

A word of Appreciation: We would like to thank all those who took part in the Holy Week ceremonies. We wish everyone a Happy Easter and extend Easter Blessings to all.
